

This Valentine's Day felt like it was going to be one that is different than the others. Today started off normal with my parents walking into my room saying Happy Valentine's Day and then going into my brother's room yelling HAPPY BIRTHDAY JACOB. Yeah yeah Jacob was born on February 14th aka Valentine's Day which is pretty funny to me. I love my family because they're very nice and caring.

I walk into school knowing that I would get teased and made fun of because it was Valentine's Day. You may be thinking, 'Why are you getting made fun of on Valentine's Day?' well I get made fun of because I am dating this one girl and I like her a lot so I always get teased for it. It doesn't bother me to much because I don't worry about it because I know that I am lucky to have this girl in my life.

So after the 5 minute bell went off and I went to class I got going on my classwork. Some of my friends keep teasing me but I just continue with my work and waiting for the time where the bell will signal lunch because that's when I get to see Her.

In middle school the Valentine's Day activities are different than Elementary but they're still very fun. In middle school we actually do activities where in Elementary you would exchange candies and other things. In Spanish we played Amigo Secreto which is like Secret Santa but Secret friend. Now as I am in ELA we are writing our own memoirs which is this that I am writing. I find it kind of weird writing like this because I usually don't. I keep looking at the clock as it closes in on 11:31 which is when we go to lunch, and you all know why I want to go to lunch because I get to see my girlfriend which is what one could say. I like today because to me today is about her, my friends, my family, and my brother.

Even though there is hardly any light of the sun outside today I know that when we go out to recess the sun will come out and shine on to Her beautiful brown eyes and brown hair and make her look like an angel that has come down from Heaven.

My teacher is now telling me time is up so as I wrap this memoir up and maybe put a bow on it, really all I would like to say is that this day is amazing because I got this amazing girl with beautiful eyes I like to look into and a perfect smile I like to smile with. She amazing and perfect for me.