

In preschool, I would bring a paper bag with Transformers valentines in it. I would give them to everyone (even the kid who had kicked me off the playset that I still remember, and I will never forget you). I would put the little heart stickers on it that came in the box, with the name of the kid I was giving it to. After we had given out our Valentine's, it was nap time. I would get my life size Yoda stuffed animal out of my cubby with my Transformer blanket. After our 10 min. nap, we would watch a movie with a little disposable cup filled of popcorn. We would always watch an old movie, like the Wizard of Oz or something like that. Then our parents or someone would come and pick us up ,and we would grab some crackers from a bin to eat on our way home. I remembered that one Valentines Day, my dad had picked me up and my mom had given him a watch to give to each of us. My watch was a frog, and when you would push a button it would light up. And then we went home and dad had cooked us a Kidz Cuisine. Then, he gave me my plastic Shrek action figure, and put me in my room for another nap. Anyways, Happy Valentine's Day! <3
